STEAM Challenge at Meadowbrook

4th grade students at Meadowbrook School in Hillsdale participated in a STEAM (science, technology, engineering, art, and math) challenge during media class. They were given a spoon, bottle cap, rubber bands, and popsicle sticks and were tasked with creating a catapult. They tested their catapults with pom poms of varying sizes and made predictions about which pom pom would travel farther. The class found that the smallest pom pom launched the farthest.

Pictured are Arthur Batista, Jackson Newell, Andrew Li, and Tyler Kardell. You can see their excitement as one pom pom landed past the length of the measuring tape!
